Jean Baudrillard

In the mid 19th century, Lord Ongeley insisted that residents of his model village of Old Warden, Bedfordshire, dress up in a parody of mediaeval rustic garb. Baudrillard does not help us to understand much about the event and does not even help us to grasp the role of the media in contemporary political spectacles. Hence, I came to the idea, it is essential to have a separate category as such for these kinds of concepts.

Gerry Coulter, Sophie Calle and Baudrillard's "Pursuit in Venice", by Alan N. Shapiro « Alan N. Shapiro, Autonomy in the Digital Society

The entire group and a few very nice French people had intense discussions which lasted from 9 A. She did not have the studious discipline to write her graduating thesis, but Baudrillard offered her a free pass. Our location, as consumers, falls somewhere in between the exorcised historicity of the model and the contemporaneity of the series.

The Uncollected Baudrillard

Wormholes are tunnels that connect two areas of space or time. Driven toward virtualization in a high-tech society, all the imperfections of human life and the world are eliminated in virtual reality, but this is the elimination of reality itself, the Perfect Crime. L'échange impossible, Galilee Paris, France, 1999, translation by Chris Turner published as Impossible Exchange, Verso New York, NY, 2001.

A Poetic Anthropology of War: Jean Baudrillard and the 1991 Gulf War

The post-1990 texts continue the fragmentary style and use of short essays, aphorisms, stories, and aperçus that Baudrillard began deploying in the 1980s and often repeat some of the same ideas and stories. In this era of capitalist development, economic concentration, new production techniques, and the development of new technologies, accelerated capacity for mass production and capitalist corporations focused increased attention on managing consumption and creating needs for new prestigious goods, thus producing the regime of what Baudrillard has called sign-value.

The Uncollected Baudrillard by Jean Baudrillard

Baudrillard, Jean 1995 : The Perfect Crime. Bataille, Georges 1949 : The Accursed Share: An Essay on General Economy, Vol. Has the hyperfunctionalism of consumer culture described by Baudrillard completely taken hold or does the consumer retain some ability to choose between hypermarkets and local markets.
