Wilkinson, already an old woman when I was a child, had been brought up at Newhouse and, as a child, used to take her father's dinner to him at the quarries, walking through the fields via Needlehouse, the next farm to Newhouse, and up through Uldale Wood. His head was severed and set on a spike over Clonmel jail as a warning against agrarian violence. The following lists John Cornwall McGavestons assets at the time of his death.
