Marlborough A beautiful and luxurious market town, has the second widest high street in Britain, giving it a wonderful sense of grandeur. All this trade often brought in much wealth for the towns themselves, which is reflected in the beautiful period buildings they had built, many of which still stand immaculately preserved today, in the form of houses, shops, old coaching inns, town halls, and of course the fine local churches. It developed on a hillside between the gap of the river and a Norman Castle built to guard that part of the South Downs.
