Rapid Response activities include: establishing onsite contact with employers and employee representatives upon notification of a current or projected closure or mass layoff; or in the case of a disaster, immediately after the state is made aware of mass job dislocation as a result of such disaster; provision of information and access to available employment and training activities; assistance in establishing a labor-management committee; provide emergency assistance adapted to the particular closure, layoff, disaster; and the provision of assistance to the local community in developing a coordinated response and in obtaining access to state economic development assistance.

WIOA Dislocated Worker Program

It describes in detail: 1 the background, design, conduct, and content of the programs at each demonstration site; 2 the evaluation design, implementation process, data collection effort, and analysis; 3 factors that influenced participation in the program, with special emphasis on characteristics of the program intake process, participants' backgrounds, and available program services; 4 program impacts for men and for women, as well as other key subgroups, in terms of their future earnings, employment, and unemployment insurance benefits; and 5 program costs. Workers who need training are retrained with skills that are in demand by Montana's employers. The Dislocated Worker program is designed to help workers get back to work as quickly as possible and overcome barriers to employment.

Dislocated Worker Program

Abstract Bloom presents findings from the Texas Worker Adjustment Demonstration, a 2,192-person randomized experimental evaluation of reemployment programs for displaced workers conducted at three sites in Texas. Rapid Response is carried out by states and local workforce development agencies in partnership with local American Job Center. Information on this program, including how to access them locally through an AJC, please visit the Career One-Stop site at www.careerone-stop.gov, or call ETA's toll-free help line at 877 US-2JOBS TTY: 1-877-872-5627.
