How the Angels of Bataan and Corregidor survived

In early 1942, the Japanese began transporting POWs back to the home islands and other territories to serve in slave labor camps. The Japanese were on the offensive all over the Pacific, achieving a string of humiliating defeats to the American military. As the position on Bataan neared collapse, around 1,200 men were shifted to Corregidor from the peninsula.

A Legacy of Heroes: The Story of Bataan and Corregidor

Major Santos was then given the hazardous mission of closing the gaps and annihilating the enemy troops who had infiltrated the lines, as the gap posed a serious threat to the positions and the security of the division. This has to be one of the most powerful pieces of war literature I have read.

Fierce fighting marked the action.
