So it is possible that it is degraded enough that the toxic components may not longer be toxic to cats if it contained any in the first place , however this source suggests the overall the heating of an essential oil renders it more toxic and less effective.

PetSafe Scoop

Citrus-based oils should be avoided, since cats are often allergic or sensitive to these oils. According to Jim Duke, retired botanist, USDA annual rainfall can range from 12-54 inches per year for lavender cultivation Foster, 1993.

Lavender: History, Taxonomy, and Production

Lavender is 70-80% water and takes 7 to 14 days to dry. Among the guests of Reginald and Meredith Doyle are Theodosia Browning, owner of Charleston's Indigo Tea Shop, and her tea sommelier, Drayton Conneley. I would like to use: frankinsence, myrrh, peppermint, lavender, turmeric, clove, cinnamon, roman chamomile, ginger, helichrysum and eucalyptus.
