Hopefully it will work as well as our did! Can you imagine this life for yourself? It wouldn't be too much work to simply mow the areas between the rows with a simple lawn mower and rake it onto the tilled sections to keep down the weeds. It is just a little in-row weeding because the mulch has taken care of the space between the rows. Carrots were actually the easiest one to figure because I could store them in the root cellar and market them throughout the winter.
