FDA that contain toxic methanol. CDC has created a checklist to help with ongoing planning for school year SY 2020-2021.

School Inspections

Schools will be making changes to their policies and operations with several goals: supporting learning; providing important services, such as school meals, extended daycare, extracurricular activities, and social services; and limiting the transmission of SARS-CoV-2, the virus that causes COVID-19. If your school is requiring or encouraging the use of , think about the following actions. Consider asking what steps your school will take to minimize the potential for students to be singled out or teased for wearing or not wearing a mask.

COVID

Watch for changes like excessive crying or irritation, excessive worry or sadness, unhealthy eating or sleeping habits, difficulty concentrating, which may be signs of your child struggling with. This could be a quiet, well-lit place in your dining room or living room or a corner of your home that could fit a small table, if available. If so, identify a point of contact for these services at your school.

School Inspections

. If transmission is increasing in your community or if multiple children or staff test positive for COVID-19, the school building might close.

COVID

In addition, if your child receives speech, occupational, or physical therapy or other related services from the school, ask your school how these services will continue during virtual at-home learning. Likewise, it will be important for families to emphasize and model healthy behaviors at home and to talk to your children about changes to expect this school year. Some of these action items and points to consider might warrant additional conversations with your school administrators or healthcare provider.

School Inspections

You may need to consider the feasibility of teleworking, taking leave from work, or identifying someone who can supervise your child in the event of school building closures or quarantine.

COVID

You may want to talk to school staff to learn more about what they are doing to support connection among students, interactive learning with feedback, building resilience, and social-emotional wellbeing for students who will not be onsite. Your school may offer virtual learning or have new policies and practices in place to prevent the spread of COVID-19 during in-person learning.
