Transitioning From Nursing Practice to a Teaching Role

With increasing years since the transition, some participants may not accurately remember their NP role transition experiences and may have forgotten the positive or negative aspects of the transition. Faculty development is an ongoing process and requires self-direction and motivation. Your coach can assist you with resources to complete class projects, help you get in touch with instructors and staff, and connect you with career services.

Transitioning from Clinical Nurse to Educator

The remainder of your time will be dedicated to preparing for upcoming lectures and clinical sessions. USF education programs provide our candidates with the necessary tools, skills, and experiences to become successful, life-long educators.

Transitioning From Nursing Practice to a Teaching Role

If you already have a BSN, you will need to obtain an MSN to qualify for a position as an educator. Although the transition may be challenging, there are many strategies you can employ to guide you through this process. The Consensus Model for APRN Regulation: Licensure, Accreditation, Certification, and Education addresses the growing number of practicing NPs and their value in the healthcare system through efforts to align NP education, accreditation, and licensure.

I make a difference : making the transition from clinician to educator

Tenure-track faculty typically are full-time employees who hold titles such as Professor, Associate Professor, and Assistant Professor. All faculty members should be well versed in the rights and legal, ethical, and moral responsibilities that are inherent in this role. Most schools require about five office hours per week.
