Aberhart and Harper on Crusade: Konrad Heiden, Nazis and Social Credit

Stevens and his Reconstruction party taking 8. Some 2,000 people attended the Tory pow-wow, the largest Conservative event in the province in five years. Control was originally planned to be transferred on 1 December 1869, but due to the premature action of the new lieutenant governor, the people of Red River formed a provisional government that took control until arrangements could be negotiated by leaders of what is known as the and the newly formed Government of Canada.

Other than Macdonald, Mulroney was the only Tory leader to truly master Québec, in no small part because he was perceived as a francophone inside Quebec and as an Anglophone by the English provinces. In placing Macdonald firmly at the foot of Parliament Hill we encourage parliamentarians to follow his lead to sustain a grand Canada that is strong, independent, united and respectful.

Five things you should know about: Bob Plamondon

Harper wanted to balance the budget in time for the 2015 election, regardless of whether that meant ending postal delivery, closing scientific facilities or cutting services to veterans.

Stephen Harper meets the Tory legacy

This blog is actually my research for a book I'm currently writing under the working title: Aberhart and Harper on Crusade, but that won't be the title I publish it under, if I eventually do. Let's be clear about the thesis of the book.
