Primary vs Secondary Sources

Regular text starts after period.

Body of Thesis or Dissertation

Each time you use some information from a source, you will need to cite the source that it came from. If it appears in a printed publication like a book or magazine, the title of the publication in italics comes next, followed by any volume or issue numbers in plain text, followed by the year, followed by the page numbers in which the interview appears. .

Bibliography or List of References

. They often try to describe or explain primary sources.

Writing Dissertations: Reference List/Bibliography

A discussion of writing style follows the section on annotation types. Referencing includes a citation within the text of your dissertation and a list of references at the end of your dissertation. Primary sources provide raw information and first-hand evidence.

10.1 Types of Sources: Primary, Secondary, Tertiary

Examples of referencing format; Books: Name, date.

Writing Dissertations: Reference List/Bibliography

Bibliography for Newspaper and Magazine Articles For newspapers and magazines, you should include the author, the article title in quotation marks , the title of the newspaper or publication in italics , the date of publication, and the page numbers from which the information was gathered. Write down the citation information for each source as you review it, whether or not you think you will actually use it; it will keep your notes more organized and help you find information quickly when you're actually writing.
