to tolerate cold — or hardy — cold-tolerant. When the foliage has turned yellow or brown on your tender bulbs, and before the first frost, you'll need to protect them or dig them up and store them for the winter. In colder climates, plant hardy bulbs as soon as possible after purchase.

Tips & Information about Bulbs

Spring bulbs: In warmer climates bulbs that require chilling can be dug up and stored until pre-chilling time the following fall. To divide bulbs, simply separate these offsets and replant them, pointy end up, to create new plants.
