Free Trade Hall: Cultural hotspot that beat the blitz

The ensembles here sounded full of fire, and there was one lovely passage for two tenors, clarinet, alto, baritone and flute. In 1858, five years after its opening, the Halle Orchestra made the venue its home and, apart from the intervention of World War II, the hall would be the home of the Halle until its closure in 1996.

The Sex Pistols' 1976 Manchester That Changed the and the Day the Punk Era Began

It has one great defect.

Free Trade Hall

It became the home of the Hallé Orchestra shortly after opening.

I Swear I Was There

It was like something out of Life On Mars. He mithered me to go and see his band, so I gave in in the end and went.

Ken Colyer • Live At Manchester Free Trade Hall 1959

It was the precise location of the infamous Peterloo Massacre that took place on 16 August 1819.

Sanitas Sanitatum, Omnia Sanitas

I saw many bands here including The Rolling Stones and it was, in my humble opinion, The venue in the city centre. Their show involved lots of leather shorts and much thigh slapping! It was bombed in the Manchester Blitz and its interior rebuilt. The world of music would look, feel and sound very different had it not been for Joy Division.

May 7: Bob Dylan

Pop concerts were stopped there for a time, after girls wrote in lipstick, on the wood panelling at a Cliff Richard concert. For in the audience were future members of the Howard Devoto and Pete Shelley who organized the gig and opened for the Pistols ; a nascent version of; the two founders of Martin Hannet and Tony Wilson; Mark E.

The Runaways Concert Setlist at Free Trade Hall, Manchester on November 12, 1977

This was unfortunate for Hawkwind because they were dross on the night and got booed off the stage!! Christabel Pankhurst immediately began an impromptu meeting outside, and when the police moved them on, contrived to be arrested and brought to court. The Free Trade Hall was built between 1853 and 1856 by Edward Walters.
