A History of Eastern Europe: Crisis and Change

The suggestive simile by which the life of the aged saint in this world is depicted.

Abigail Mott, 1766

On his return to Paris he received a small post in the Bibliotheque Nationals, which, together with the savings of Henriette, who had now come to live with him, kept the two alive.

Job 5

ENCOURAGEMENT TODAY, CONQUERING DOUBT! PART 17

True, the canopy of sapphire was there, but no magnificent array of clouds to form golden masses with edges of burning crimson, or islands of loveliest hue set in a sea of emerald; there were no great conflagrations of splendour or flaming peaks of mountains of fire. Hope is the nerve—it is the backbone—of all true life, of all serious efforts to battle with evil, and to live for God. Thanks be to thee, O heavenly Father, who, for my salvation, hast sent thy beloved Son, and given 102 chhist's sufferings before -him up to be reviled, insulted and put to death! At last, the Father gained over the most influential one of all the Old Men, and strongly interested him in our plan,- which was that he had something new to tell them about Hell; and, above all, that these are not fables, as the majority of them had imagined.
