Care Leavers and Transition to Adulthood

The local authority should make every effort not to disrupt a young person's education during their key stage 4 years, both in terms of their school and care placement unless the circumstances clearly require this see also. The social worker is responsible for ensuring that the outcome of the assessment is explained to the young person.

Leaving care

Support is available for young people wishing to continue their education from the Virtual School 16 Plus Team. More Resources Access essential accompanying documents and information for this legislation item from this tab. This extension applies even if the young person is detained overnight.

Care Leavers and Transition to Adulthood

The young person must be visited on a regular basis and it is good practice for the first visit to take place within ten working days. We published in March 2004. What support is there for care leavers? On completion and approval of the Pathway Plan, all parties involved including the young person should sign it.

5.7.1 Leaving Care and Transition

The Personal Adviser should meet with the care leaver and, based on the assessment of their needs and the suitability of the course, update the Pathway Plan. Although there is no requirement to proactively keep in touch with all young people aged over 21 up to age 25 throughout the year, the duty under the Children and Social Work Act 2017 requires local authorities to make care leavers aware that they can continue to request Personal Adviser support as soon as possible after they turn 21; and on at least an annual basis thereafter. Coram Voice has produced a resource to guide children in care and leaving care in making a complaint which can be accessed.
