Child Abandonment Issues Following the Loss of a Parent

Coming to this realization at only 3 years old was devastating.

How do children deal with the death of a parent?

Make a photo album and journal Create an album of photographs and stories. The result is Howe's radio drama-documentary, Remembering Mum.

When Children Grieve

Like all of us, children grieve differently, depending on their age, development level, and personality. A sudden, violent death, for example, puts survivors at a higher risk of developing a grief disorder.

Grades K

There were patterns in their accounts and I could work with those images. Make time to sit down and listen Your child will talk when they are ready and usually in small bursts.

The Death of a Parent Changes Adult Children Forever

Unfortunately, financial realities and lack of available programming nearby often means that many bereaved families are left to cope on their own, with only their families or friends providing support. Figure out how to ask for help, not just in the immediate weeks, but also over time, so that the emotional fallout can be dealt with thoroughly, and.
