Skaner Y, Bring J, Bengt U, Davis RC, et al. In a judgment context, the lens model is best described in terms of an approach called judgment analysis, which requires a substantial number of multi-attribute situations about which a person makes judgments. Judgement analysis offers a means of examining the information used by clinicians in their decision making: it can be used to compare a decision to an agreed standard, such as a protocol or guideline, or to that of another clinician or reference group.
