3: Anthropological Theory

Molecular Anthropology Molecular anthropologists use molecular techniques primarily genetics to compare ancient and modern populations and to study living populations of humans and nonhuman primates. In fact, many landfills hold large amounts of paper products and construction debris Rathje and Murphy 1992.

1.3 Theoretical Perspectives in Sociology

She enjoyed observing the different ways people interacted in public spaces, like the mall or the zoo. He provides ethnic details and histories of the peoples within the empire and to the north of it, in most cases being the first to do so. Ecological materialism Physical and economic causes give rise to cultures and explain changes in them.

Anthropological Theories A guide prepared by students for students

London; Vermont: Pickering and Chatto. Some speculate this may have to do with changes in our diet, while others believe it may also have to do with exposure to chemicals in the environment or other factors. To understand how information in this field is established, it is important to recognize what science is and is not as well as understand how the scientific method actually works.

HAU: Journal of Ethnographic Theory

How does language influence our views of the world? He wrote that Hopi has no grammatical tenses to convey the passage of time. Nearly every culture and society has a unique origin story that explains where they came from and how they came to be who they are today. Other biological anthropologists focus on extinct human species, asking questions like: What did our ancestors look like? Their definition of the situation depends not only on whether they shake hands but also, if they do not shake hands, on why they do not.

1.5: Cultural Anthropology Methodology and Theory

Many important discoveries were in fact made by mistake.

MSU Department of Anthropology

This is a bit dangerous in my view given that many students in introductory courses may be skeptical of anthropology's validity.

Perspectives: An Open Invitation to Cultural Anthropology

What type of interactions did prehistoric people have with their neighbors? In some ways, studying the language, culture, physiology, and artifacts of European colonies was not unlike studying the flora and fauna of those places.
