Bungalow House Plans

Copycat Craftsman designs began to crop up from architects throughout the United States, with kits available in the Sears, Roebuck and Co. Although designed for working class families, bungalows built in and near Chicago, Illinois have many of the lovely Craftsman details that you find in other parts of the US. At the time, India was under British rule, and ambassadors to the area wanted to construct economical housing that could be built quickly that they could use during their stays.

Other factors, such as our own proprietary website rules and whether a product is offered in your area or at your self-selected credit score range can also impact how and where products appear on this site. Some more recent designs have expanded verandas and loft areas to accommodate the modern family's desire to spread out. At between 1,000 and 2,000 square feet, bungalows are a great option for or retirees hoping to downsize in a home without stairs, or who want the single-family home lifestyle without managing a huge property.
