Literature in the Renaissance

Despite the fundamental differences in their teachings, the philosophers of the Hellenistic Age were all agreed upon one thing: the necessity of finding some way of, salvation for man from the hardships and evils of his existence.

Jacques Derrida

And maybe that was the reason that unlike Romanticism which was a reaction to experience, this form has always been a conscious recognition to the surroundings and atmosphere. While working on the parhelia, Descartes conceived the idea for a very ambitious treatise. Deconstructionists, by contrast, see works in terms of their undecidability.

Francis Bacon

He was secretary to the Second Chancery of the Republic of Florence from 1498 to 1512, when the Medici were out of power. They did not merely deny Descartes' particular metaphysical theories; they rejected his sort of metaphysical project altogether. The French versions of many of these essays can be found in Jacques Derrida, edited by Marie-Louise Mallet et Ginette Michaud.
