Tai nōminsō bunkai no kenkyū (Book, 1991) [sdk.mavlink.io]

The katas were being taught by Kosaku Matsumora, Choki Motubo, Chotoku Kyan and Chosin Chibana. . What these are, or how they are determined, I don't know.

No Bunkai in Wado Ryu karate?

Anyone who trains in a good judo or jujutsu schools for example, will know that there is a world of difference between an arm lock and an arm lock from someone that knows how to use their whole body correctly. The takedown was a new one, but worked really well. Anyone can find new applications, and they can found what I have found, if only they take the time to look.

Bunkai discussion (no applications)

If indeed these kata in Wado serve the purpose of being tanren training, why would kata of Okinawan origin contain movements that would be good tanren for Jujutsu stuff? Just the other evening, a student was toying with a move I had used against a grab.

Bunkai discussion (no applications)

It's about knowing and applying a handful of key principles. It might not hit hard enough, whatever.
