She founded the Círculo de Cultura Femenina which supported the education of women and resisted North American military intervention during the Second Honduran Civil War 1924. La même année débute le concept francophone du mail-roman, qui consiste à publier, un chapitre à la fois, un roman par courriel. As university programs became institutional fixtures, they also served as counter-hegemonic spaces where resistance could be facilitated.

Women during these decades found identity in their status of womanhood and their shared condition that differentiated them from men Gargallo 2004: 88.

Talkin' Broadway

The project of decolonial feminisms is a movement in process, but its core seeks to bring together the productions of thinkers, intellectuals, feminist activists, lesbian feminists, Afro-descended women, Indigenous peoples, poor mestizas, and allies committed to the historical recuperation of anti-racist theory and practice from the epistemic position of Abya Yala Espinosa Miñoso et al. They had met in 1935. Considerations of the importance of class conditions in understanding the plight of women and the poor have been long rooted in Latin American feminist ideas.

Conceptually, gender on its own is insufficient to account for the complexities of identity.
