First Session: The Human Being

Had not his face grown hair at the proper time would he not have stayed in the form of adolescents and the figures of females, without any dignity or prestige like the eunuchs who have a repulsive look in the absence of a beard? A separation would have taken place just after birth of the infant from its parents. When these followers of Mani and those of their ilk tried to impugn the belief in purposeful creation, they found fault with the growth of hair on the pubis and ampits. Let us illustrate it by an example.

He cannot perceive his foothold, whether his feet fall in a depression or on an elevation, nor can he see ahead, nor can he recognise colours, nor can he appreciate a pleasing or a forbidden face. Similarly he has been given the knowledge of those things which are beneficial to his worldly life, for example agriculture, horticulture colonisation, cattle farming, drawing water from the wells and the springs, herbal research for medical purposes, mining for different kinds of precious stones, diving in the sea, the different kinds of planning for hunting animals and birds, fishing, industry, trade and business methods and many other things which need it long detail, wherein lies the fulfilment of the affairs of man's worldly life, the betterment of his religious and mundane affairs. Just consider the matter of feeding, resting and sex, which are ordained for him and the expedencies underlying them

He would not have remembered what other people owe him and what he owes to others, what bargains he made, what he heard and what he said. Such knowledge is made available to him as is best in his interests. Who has given such resilience to the muscles of the stomach that it has been commissioned to digest coarse foods? You will laugh at him.

Human resemblance can be even more harmful. He carries on with such nutriment till puberty. Can you imagine the manner in which man, through these different stages, is led and perfected, can take place without a Designer and a Creator? Leaving others, just deliberate on one and the place it occupies in our lives.
