The Risks of Misperception in the Nuclear Standoff with North Korea

The national security concept was to provide the basis and the larger framework within which the military doctrine was to be framed and military reorganisation planned and executed. Three chapters of the new manual will heavily focus on large unit tactics during large scale ground combat, addressing both the offense and the defense during operations.

Changing doctrines

In either case—a devastating attack or an underwhelming one—the United States should expect to face significant retaliation, at least until Kim figured out whether compliance or resistance made more sense in the long term. Both Washington and Pyongyang now think the other is responsible for derailing diplomacy. India and Pakistan are now acknowledged members of the nuclear club.

Military doctrine in the SANDF since 1994 (*). (Chapter Two).

While ratifying START II, a clause has been included in the document by the Russian Parliament that Russia would withdraw from the treaty obligations and all other arms control agreements if Washington goes ahead with its projected building of a National Missile Defence NMD system in violation of 1972 ABM treaty.

Beyond that, it also appears to consider nuclear weapons to be a source of prestige and thus wants acceptance as a de facto nuclear state, much as Pakistan has. This indictment of the Soviet armed forces High Command and of Stalin personally was offered by A.

Revised doctrine prepares Soldiers for changing global threats

Did Kim seek a summit with Trump because he is desperate for sanctions relief and willing to make concessions or because he seeks the prestige of a presidential summit and de facto recognition of North Korea as a nuclear power? Only after bitter disappointments in their war against Finland, and after having observed the successes of the Germans against Poland and France, did the Soviet High Command turn to the practical re-equipping and retraining of the armed forces for large-scale, mobile offensive and defensive operations. National Security is a blend of long term political vision, level of internal security, development level of human resources, availability of food for the population, degree of technological competence and availability of natural resources for exploitation by an appropriate industrial base, protected by military might. Both highlight the central necessity of ensuring stable economic development as a basis for ensuring the country's national interests in every sphere.
