Queen Mary and Hindenburg: A Detailed Comparison

In 1641 the ship was loaded with 100,000 pounds of gold, 400 bars of Mexican silver and a huge amount of precious jewels. Until the summer of 1952, the fastest ship in the world was the Queen Mary, which had held the trans-Atlantic record for 14 years. Millionaire Benjamin Guggenheim, heir to his family's mining business, also perished, along with Isidor Straus, the German-born co-owner of Macy's department store.
