10 Reasons to Visit a Museum

Food is important for constructing and sustaining our identities, social boundaries and cultural differentiation. Eating is an intensely personal act.

The Importance of Museums: Preserving Local Culture

Objects were arranged first by medium—ceramic, metalwork, glass—that is, according to categories that made the most sense to a visiting artisan.

Religion in Museums

In the former context the consumption of luxury foods is used primarily to create or enhance social bonds, in the latter to create or enhance exclusivity and distance. When big retail chains are selling organic products, this line is becoming increasingly blurred and confused, leading some to question if there are really. Today, curation is a democratic enterprise that values people above objects, buildings or landscapes.

Museums And The Making Of The Role Of Objects In National Identity by Flora Edouwaye S. Kaplan

Studies are drawn from areas that were or are presently on the periphery of the western industrialised world. The current foodie culture and diversity of foods in western cultures has made food a much more democratic facet of modern societies.

Eating yourself: We consume identity through food?

Moving forward, the interesting thing to keep an eye on is our use of food as reflexive behaviour to changes in society and culture. Title : Museums and the making of 'ourselves' : the role of objects in national identity Editor : ; Publication year : Language : ; Abstract : Essays examine the relationship between museums, objects, and the creation of cultural and national identity.

The Importance of Museums: Preserving Local Culture

The research group is organised to coincide with the forthcoming Empires of Faith exhibition on Buddhist, Christian, Islamic, Jewish and Hindu art of the first millennium AD in the Ashmolean running from October 2017 to February 2018. Since then, the Mississippi Museum of Art has hired interpretation specialists, established collaborative team meetings across departments, and created community advisory councils and anonymous online panels that review ideas for exhibitions. This presents another paradox in.
