The Guinness Book of Classic British TV (September 13, 1996 edition)

Long-term characters, such as David and Barbara Hunter, were axed. Characters in the show's early years included Meg and Kitty's brother, Andy Fraser, played by Ian Patterson. He's been Hugo Award-nominated for all three media, and has won the BSFA Award for his short fiction, and the Eagle Award for his comics.

Home and Away (1972 TV series)

The compensation was for them building a motorway through her land.

The actress herself was terribly upset by the decision. The episode was included in the Omnibus edition that Sunday. The Hotel, called the Droitwich Hotel in the story, was also used.

Home and Away (1972 TV series)

His new urban fantasy novel is London Falling, out from Tor on December 6th.

Home and Away (1972 TV series)

It was thought to have little enthusiasm for the programmes it inherited. ATV planned to replace the fourth episode with a series called A Family Affair but this idea was dropped.
