Scott, Elsie (1898

In one instance she gave young children suffering from impetigo a highly contagious bacterial skin infection that causes itchy red sores, often on the face or arms paper towels and told them that when the bandages came off the sores, they should be wrapped in the towels and burned.

Re: Gipsy Unora Welty m. James

In those days, when each major island had its own separate telephone system, she made sure to always inform each island operator of her whereabouts and travels so that she could be reached relatively quickly.

Citation

It is this legacy of compassion and skill, friendship and caring that has lasted in islanders' memories for so many years. She returned to school for further training at the University of Washington's Public Health Program and graduated in 1928. Clouds of geese filling the skies present a spellbinding scene.

History

A year later, Frank remarried at age 68 to Annie Sulik of La Grange.

History

Judge and his wife immediately flew to Port Townsend and word came to the community that Miss Scott would be hospitalized for at least two weeks.

Citation

One cannot typically seek redress for others.
