Judaism 101: The Role of Women

The Basic Laws The positive contribution of the legislature is significantly reflected in the passage of two new Basic Laws — , and. Justice Silberg has held that where a religious purpose is not primary to a law but the provisions of that law can be justified by the secular purpose achieved, no infringement of religious freedom occurs, even if the statutory provision also serves some religious purpose. Almost all the rest belongs at law to Arab owners, many of whom have left the country.
