Nests are usually found in sheltered locations, such as caves or under tree branches or, if you are unlucky, in the eaves of your house! Check out " for more articles like this! Busy bees build beehives Image courtesy of We don't mean the man-made beehives for domesticated honeybees in apiaries, though they are cleverly designed and serve their purpose well; we mean the natural beehives found in nature and originally created by the bees themselves. They owe their name to their nests, which are tightly woven chambers hanging from trees, often several to a tree or even branch.
