People say that drinking relieves anxieties, but I say that it only excites them, depending upon one's mood when one begins to drink: if one is happy, drinking will arouse feelings that one had previously pacified, and if one is beset with cares, it will remind one of the situation one is in and of even worse situations, and lead one down evil paths. Likewise, the soul as the greatest creation in the hidden world, shares its nature with all hidden existents.

For the latter argument, see Dimitri Gutas, Avicenna and the Aristotelian Tradition: Introduction to Reading Avicenna's Philosophical Works Leiden: E. But there is no escape from losing these things, sooner or later, during one's lifetime or at one's death. Von Grunebaum, however, argued that foreign influences were minimal and that the major impulse for the rise of Arabic autobiography lay within the indigenous Arabic literary tradition.
