Central America

Identification: MS 24 Extent: 15. By arguing that this movement secularized the Christian faith and effectively rid Catholicism of its connection to the afterlife, John Paul II and other prominent religious leaders were able to quell the movement and alarm people enough to associate liberation theology with a loss of faith Lynch 1994, 10. In fact, there is no evidence to believe that Mexican and Central American immigrants and their descendants will maintain their political attachments to their ancestral homelands.
