Funding Higher Education in Tanzania: Modalities, Challenges, Prospects and a Proposal for New Funding Modalities

In: Funding Higher Education in Sub-Saharan Africa. The major thesis of this chapter is that the current modalities of funding public higher education are unsustainable and unrealistic in the wake of the surging demand for higher education. Center for Comparative and Global Studies in Education, State University of New York at Buffalo.

Muhlenberg College 18 EPD 8813 1978. This chapter further argues that while the government has the responsibility of funding public higher education, since it is also a beneficiary, its financial ability to fund both public and private higher education, as is the practice or malpractice now, is limited because there are too many competing demands for government funds or because higher education is not a priority, or both.
