St Baithin's Church, Roman Catholic St Baithin's Church, St Johnston was consecrated on Sunday 9th of December 1860. This Church was never completed or used. We don't know when the first Church was built but we know that in 1693 the Church of Ireland Diocese of Derry had a Chapel of Ease near Killea village.

The independence of the Catholic Church of Ireland from Rome began to end at the Synod of Rathreasil 1110 AD and Rome began to take more control over the Churches in general as the papacy more and more came to believe it was the head of the Church.

Reverend Thomas Grylls (1790

It seems that the famine was not as destructive in the Laggan area as it was elsewhere because it was such a fertile area and because of the fishing. The tower was restored using the same stone and the same design. A clachan or village began near the monastery.

History of Churches in St Johnston and Carrigans Area

Reverend Andrew Long wrote about a religious revival in Monreagh which took place in the 1850's. The Church was designed in a cruciform format, it makes the shape of the cross.
