Equity Bank Careers and Employment

Specifically, the chapter focuses on the problem encountered by litigants in respect to the exorbitant costs associated with judicial review and the attempt by the Government to address this. The general counsel is expected to spot such issues and have a view about them. This chapter addresses the issues and arguments surrounding access to justice.

The chapter lists objections to registrability based on the mark's own characteristics. So which portrayal is accurate? The program taught in a very clear and concise way how to understand a company's rationale and incentives to complete an LBO, and from the very beginning it pushed me to further develop my accounting and financial statement analysis skills.

Comments	Supervisory approval is necessary for a shareholder that obtains more than 20 percent of the voting rights for a bank and reporting obligations commence at the 10 percent threshold. However, major changes in the shareholding structures above the 20 percent threshold do not necessarily need supervisory approval ahead of time, although changes of more than one percentage point need to be reported by shareholders to the JPSA. In practice, intentions are clarified with respect to possible future majority shareholdings as soon as a shareholder becomes a major shareholder, and entry conditions could then be set on future increases, especially after the major shareholder crosses the 50 percent threshold as indicated in EC2. That said, the authors believe that authorities are generally better placed to exercise influence before a transaction takes place rather than having to respond by imposing additional obligations after the fact. Thus, especially where a major shareholder obtains a majority shareholding (controlling interest), this should in the supervisor's view be subject to a pre-approved process given the changes this might entail for bank governance structures and business models and so that the JPSA is able to proactively assess the capacity of a majority shareholder to provide financial support to the bank in times of stress. This could be implemented, for instance, using JPSA's powers to impose a condition on the approval of a major shareholder that a possible future majority holding by that major shareholder would be subject to a pre-approval by the JPSA before their voting interest crosses the 50 percent threshold.
Principle 7	Major acquisitions. The supervisor has the power to approve or reject (or recommend to the responsible authority the approval or rejection of), and impose prudential conditions on, major acquisitions or investments by a bank, against prescribed criteria, including the establishment of cross border operations, and to determine that corporate affiliations or structures do not expose the bank to undue risks or hinder effective supervision.
Essential criteria EC1	Law or regulations clearly define: (a) what types and amounts (absolute and/or in relation to a bank's capital) of acquisitions and investments need prior supervisory approval; and (b) cases for which notification after the acquisition or investment is sufficient. Such cases are primarily activities closely related to banking and where the investment is small relative to the bank's capital.
Description and findings in EC1	Approvals necessary for acquisition and investment are defined by the Banking Act as follows: Acquisition and establishment of a branch or subsidiary A bank that intends to merge with another bank must obtain a pre-approval from the JPSA Commissioner in accordance with Article 34-1 of the Banking Act. A bank that intends to hold a subsidiary either in Japan or other jurisdictions must be pre-approved by the JPSA Commissioner in accordance with Article 34-2 of the Banking Act. Note: Approval by the JPSA is not required in cases where a bank intends to hold a subsidiary that operates purely monetary businesses for the bank in which conducts transactions without the bank's assets or funds. The JPSA currently defines a
