The Future of London: 2030 and beyond

Some young, and willing to question the status quo; others with private sector experience that are less influenced by public sector convention. The Commission advocates that, for London to achieve its greatest potential — for the wider UK as well as the city itself — through to 2030 and beyond, it needs policymakers, both in national and London government, to aim to be an international super city. But also established council CIOs who realise that old ways are rapidly losing relevance.
