A Report on progress in implementing the national service framework for coronary heart disease in the Croydon area (2004 edition)

In the US there was acceleration in growth of expenditure, in part because of the slower growth in managed care enrolment and a movement towards less-restrictive forms of managed care driven by consumer pressure. It described a vision for the future of patient choice of provider, a reduction in waiting times to a maximum of 18 weeks by 2008, maximum wait of eight weeks for referral to treatment for cancer patients by 2005, and delivering more care, more quickly through investment and reform, offering people more personalised care and a greater degree of choice, and greater concentration on prevention rather than cure. A tendency to complacency in the western world contrasted with the tragedies elsewhere.

1998

NICE was unusual in having a formal appeals process.
