Kursk is next and this is one of the largest chapters in the book. The author includes in his discussion useful statistics to help the reader understand the great superiority of men and weapons the Russians have over their enemy.

The 12 page Bibliography is also helpful if further reading of mostly secondary sources is desired. Mr Mitcham provides info involving September concerning the German retreat that is usually missing from other accounts. He also tells how Hitler caused unnecessary losses through his unrealistic concepts of strategy and tactics.
