New Analysis Shows Problematic Boom In Higher Ed Administrators

We've talked about, for example, adding an e-sports program

Whether they enroll, and whether they can or will live on campus, are major factors in how much will have to be cut. Is there another population it should be serving? Will employees still be fairly compensated if we sunset that benefit program? We have already made significant reductions in management and administrative costs beyond the 15% the province has requested of public entities. The refund is, in part, why the university expects to have an next academic year.

Tough Choices: Falling Enrollment, COVID Pressure College Cities And Towns

It's deeper than that, it's the way people think about higher education, how much they feel it is useful in terms of return on investment, so there are other reasons, but it will manifest itself, at least according to these reports, largely through declining enrolment and perhaps even steeply declining enrollment.

Efficiency and Cost Reduction: What to Stop Doing

You never visited one of your final college contenders in the first place? Niles: Well, I think that what you said is really key.

Eric Kaler: Criticism of U's fiscal care shortsighted

Try to talk to students and professors again if you can to get the inside scoop. We know that college-bound students, however, are not all ages 18 to 24, that that average age of a student enrolled in college have shifted and they are older. Value for money and debt aversion — the pincer movement of those two social forces could lead to real change.
