Multi agency auditing

It is also important to note the long-standing finding that low-birth weight children born to families living in poverty often have poorer outcomes relative to those born to families not living in poverty, even when interventions are implemented to support their early development. Mothers who received 10 sessions of this attachment-based parenting program revealed more supportive parenting behaviors relative to controls.

Implementing the Strengthening Families Approach to Child Protection Conferences

A variety of approaches have been developed to promote parenting practices related to behavior management. Fatal child maltreatment: characteristics of deaths from physical abuse versus neglect. The rate of children who died under the age of 1 was 20.

Implementing the Strengthening Families Approach to Child Protection Conferences

Some shelters now offer structured parenting programs, although there is very little evidence on the nature or effectiveness of these. It is delivered in eight to ten sessions in individual, group, or self-directed online or workbook formats.

Serious Case Reviews (SCRs) in child protection briefings

Notably, mothers at discharge had better outcomes on all parenting measures than both a comparison group of nonhospitalized mothers with mental illness of comparable severity and a group of mothers without mental illness in the community.

5 Targeted Interventions Supporting Parents of Children with Special Needs, Parents Facing Special Adversities, and Parents Involved with Child Welfare Services

Each session focused on working through a problem identified by the mother using the steps of PST goal setting, brainstorming, evaluating solutions, choosing a solution, and action planning.

Serious Case Reviews (SCRs) in child protection briefings

Family group conferences can be used in any serious situation where a plan and decision needs to be made about a vulnerable adult or child. These elements are detailed in program manuals.

Child deaths from abuse and neglect

In this paper we define a child as being under the age of 18 years. In most cases, child death review teams rely mainly on document and case note analysis; however, in some instances, teams may conduct interviews or meet with staff or families of the deceased. Although more women are now being arrested for intimate partner violence, there is little information on what happens in these situations.
