A key problem has been the lack of standardization of intervention techniques. These studies show that one of the best predictors of inter- and intranational violence is the maltreatment of women in the society. Our hope is that this volume will analyze and clarify our intuition regarding the importance of self-esteem and that it will establish self-esteem at the center of our social science research agenda.

The Social Importance of Self

From the 2010 UVA lacrosse murder, in which a male athlete was charged guilty with second degree murder of his girlfriend, to the 2004 University of Colorado Football Scandal when players were charged with nine alleged sexual assaults, studies suggest that athletes are at higher risk for committing sexual assault against women than the average student. But it is also unhelpful for those who are or believe themselves to be victims of CSA.
