Two solutions to the challenges of population aging

A great deal of Christian self-definition over the centuries—involving an astonishing amount of intellectual passion and energy—has consequently been devoted to deciding issues of inclusion and exclusion, always to the advantage, to be sure, of those doing the deciding. Some noted that on many campuses, most students do not live on campus; they commute in and arrive just before class begins and leave immediately afterward to get to work or to other commitments.

Issues Affecting the Health of Older Citizens: Meeting the Challenge

On our daily commute on the New York subway, nearly four out of five adults are listening to music or podcasts, watching movies, or playing games on their iPhones, or reading from their iPads and Kindles. Taiwan Longitudinal Study on Aging Survey since 1988, 1993, 1996, 1999, 2003, 2007, 2011 Longitudinal panel design with refresh sample 50—60 years old in 1996 and 2003.

Aging in Taiwan: Building a Society for Active Aging and Aging in Place

Tourism and fiscal stimulus are key drivers of growth.

Education

Many of the caregivers who physically abused elders were themselves abused—in many cases, when they were children. How will academics, practitioners, schools of social work, governmental and NGO social welfare agencies respond to the call? The second is the sudden and shocking realization that such practices threaten to damage or even destroy the work of God in creation. There is good reason for schools to be optimistic about the possibilities of increased enrollment through offering online courses and degrees.
