Ah, what avails the sceptred race!
Ah, what the form divine!
What every virtue, every grace!
Rose Aylmer, all were thine.

Rose Aylmer, whom these wakeful eyes
May weep, but never see,
A night of memories and sighs
I consecrate to thee.

Walter Savage Landor

He quarrelled finally with his wife in 1835, and returned to England, which, however, he had to leave in 1858 on account of an action for libel arising out of a book, Dry Sticks Fagoted. Rose Aylmer commemorated in the most popular of his short poems lent him a story by Clara Reeve, which suggested to him the composition of Gebir.

The affair led to a quarrel with his father in which Landor expressed his intention of leaving home for ever. His perversities of temper soon showed themselves. He quarrelled with his father, his wife, most of his relations, and nearly all his friends, ran through a large fortune, and ended his days in Italy supported by a pension granted by his brothers.
