Roebling's Delaware Aqueduct

The NY Catskills are right across the river from this bed and breakfast. AP — Gabe Imondi, a 74-year-old landlord from Rhode Island, had come to court hoping to

Roebling's Delaware Aqueduct (U.S. National Park Service)

I didn't stay at this inn but I rode my bike past the area. John Roebling's Sons Company refused to sell out but was at a crossroads; the company, relocated to Trenton by the father in 1850, had grown beyond its resources and wanted to supply its own steel for the company's flagship wire cable. The Roeblings are quite a storied family.

1870 Roebling Inn on the Delaware

Not sure can trust the site like I always thought. Washington DC: Smithsonian Institution Press, 1971.

1870 Roebling Inn on the Delaware

The 1870 Roebling Inn is lovely, situated right on the Delaware, it's comfortable and cozy. The Inn keeper was most gracious. In the case of the Delaware Aqueduct, two 8½-inch cables were used, each composed of 2150 individual iron wires.
