Framing Places. Mediating power in built form

In creating new ideas for new kinds of problems, generative activism builds power by providing compelling visions of a better society that people are then able to bargain for. For example, material objects may require compliance through forcing functions that require a condition to be met such as the electricity being switched off before a function is enabled the opening of the maintenance panel.

Recently, there have been initiatives to anchor public places with a theme of literacy in projects such as the pop-up reading room by The UNI Project, designed by Howeler + Yoon Architecture.

‘From Riverbank Humpty to White House’

Some disruptions live only in one or two phases, and are not carried through the whole life cycle.

Framing Places: Mediating Power in Built Form

Symbolic capital is not so much created as it is moved around from one temporary landmark to another. Direct Action, Hacktivism and the Future of Society. Thanks for reading, if you made it this far! These silent framings of everyday life also mediate practices of coercion, seduction and authorization as architects and urban designers engage with the articulation of dreams; imagining and constructing a 'better' future in someone's interest.
