

Obsessive-compulsive disorder

Rosen - List of Obsessive Compulsive Disorder Medications (25 Compared)

Phase	Description
Relabel	First of all the individual should tell himself that his hands are not dirty, even though he may feel that they are dirty.
Reattribute	The individual is told to give a message to his brain that "the chemical in his brain is imbalance and therefore his brain is giving him wrong messages." For example, the person may tell himself this: "It is the OCD that is causing me to feel this way. My hands are not dirty and nothing is wrong with them."
Refocus	The individual is told to divert his attention. For example, when an OCD thought comes up, he quickly indulges himself in some other behaviours.
Revalue	The individual is told not to give importance to his OCD thoughts. For example, when an OCD thought comes up, he tells himself that "This is just my stupid obsession. There is no need to pay any attention to it."

Obsessive

This is typically accompanied by significant distress and fear that one might actually act on pedophilic urges.

Obsessive

However, the behavior is not typically connected to actual danger of something bad happening, or the behavior is extreme, such as washing hands multiple times per hour. Has no currently accepted medical use in treatment in the United States.

Obsessive

It can also be helpful for significant others and loved ones of people with OCPD to seek support for themselves. There is likely to be a biological and neurological component, and some children with OCD also have.

Primarily obsessional obsessive compulsive disorder

Obsessions are the intrusive ideas, thoughts, or images that are experienced as senseless or repugnant. For some children, the thoughts and the urges to perform certain actions persist, even if they try to ignore them or make them go away. Many people describe OCD as something that takes over their life, and this is not easy to deal with.

FDA permits marketing of transcranial magnetic stimulation for treatment of obsessive compulsive disorder
