“The Last Ship” in port at the Ahmanson

Many of these Protestants passed through Preston after arriving in England, and some settled there to wait out the conflict.

The Last Tide. A History of the Port of Preston 1806

You could see the harbor, see the sailing ships coming in. It is estimated that 130 million Native people were murdered, massacred, starved, tortured, and infected between 1492 to the present. This special winter visitor was content to forage for food on or just below the surface of the water and was also supplied with copious amounts of bread by visiting bird watchers from near and afar.

River Ribble

The son received his education in the public schools of Boston and after completing his schooling began working for his father, teaming all the details of the business in which he afterward proved such an important factor. Asbestos was another risk and respirators were introduced in 1965. The history of this factory goes back over 100 years.

SAPONI HISTORY by Scott Preston Collins

Can I decide what I want? A true Native Son of the Golden West, Edward Leodore Mayberry is also one of the best known architectural engineers in the Southland, and has been in charge of some of the most noteworthy structures that have been built in Southern California during the past half dozen years or more, and is today doing his full share in the upbuilding of his community.
