The resourceful Khalturin set up an underground print shop. New York: Monthly Review Press, 1976. The creation of the new Soviet woman was a complete rejection of the cultural values that Timasheff mentions in his thesis: the traditional familial structure, the acceptance of the Church and traditional, non-Marxist forms of education.

Bolshevik Revolution & the Soviet Experience

Their sceptical attitude seemed to be justified by the smallness of the group and the slowness of its progress. In 1817, Czar Alexander was convinced by the Holy Synod of the Russian Church that his ticket to heaven was to convert all the Jews in Russia to Russian Orthodoxy.
