Four of the Oldest Buildings in the Loop

February 27, 1987 February 27, 1987 June 29, 1989 June 29, 1989 445 E. The CBoT was the world's first modern futures exchange, set up principally to serve the needs of the Midwest agriculture market, and along with the other major exchanges in Chicago, pioneered the massive modern derivatives industry. It's a favorite for convention groups, and is connected via covered walkways to the Illinois Center, which is a major business complex.

Chicago Board of Trade Building

The Checkpoint creates a natural gateway for passengers departing on their journeys or for visitors arriving to Chicago.

History

The landmark district required the new three story addition to be carefully designed as a contemporary wing to compliment and respect the existing structure.

Oregon Historic Sites Database

The design task was to create a physical environment which matched the stature of the school and which would accommodate its expanding course offerings and growing student body. Once this has been accomplished, Federal agencies may choose to proceed with the undertaken as originally planned, modify it to mitigate damage to the property, or not undertake the project.

Biosciences Research Building

The Art Institute of Chicago is also home to a fascinating library, classrooms, studios, an auditorium and a school of cinema, making this a quintessential cultural landmark to visit in Chicago.
