Middle

Language development shifts in the teen years from basic grammar mastery to the use of language on a higher level. Their social relations also may suffer if they have difficulty in interpreting body language or understanding informal language use, such as slang, idioms or puns.

What are the different 'levels' of learning a language?

For example, their name, age, where they live, etc. These are not complex thoughts and they are often the first types of messages that children begin to communicate. Your final paper will be a piece of formal research writing that adds to the scholarship on your topic.
